

MARLING

SIXTH FORM

Downfield Road

Marling Diamond: MEDIA AND PUBLISHING

INK Magazine

INK magazine, run by sixth formers, aims to showcase the creativity of students throughout the school.

INK magazine offers a great opportunity for sixth formers who are interested in journalism, publishing, creative writing or design to develop and demonstrate a range of skills. From commissioning and editing articles, to management of the production process, to photography and page design, INK gives students a real taste of what publishing and team working is all about.

'Being the design editor for INK magazine not only gave me new skills using the Adobe Suite, but also enabled me to write an article on a topic I'm passionate about. Since the team had full creative control over the content and appearance of the magazine we were able to create a final product that we were truly proud of.'

Harry Gloyn, designer (above)

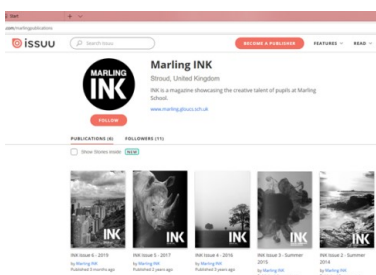

INK front covers feature photographs taken by Marling students. The 2017 photograph (above) was taken by James McGarva, who also designed that year's magazine.

New Skills

'Being in INK has helped me improve my team working skills, as well as helping with my time management. Journalism is a potential career path for me, so it has been interesting to see the work that has gone into creating such a project. I'd recommend taking part in INK to any prospective writers and also those who want to share their creativity with the school.'

Ewan Davie, student editor

INK is published online at issuu.com/marlingpublications

MARLING
MEDIA

Marling Media is a great example of a project that media minded Marling students have created in recent years. Sixth formers created interesting content, from live events to short films, to inspire the next generation of filmmakers and producers. The group offered live eSports broadcasts and short film workshops with younger Marling students.

Projects included shooting short documentary pieces on youth climate strikes and streaming live music events within the school. The group had its own live Podcast show, available on a variety of audible platforms, in which members of the group talked about a variety of subjects including mental health, exam stress and more.

Sixth formers interested in journalism or PR have the opportunity to submit articles to a local newspaper and to work with Marling's experienced communications team to learn how to produce promotional material.